- Replace/check smoke alarms and repair frequently blowing kitchen lights 4.5 / 10
Lights 'blew' again within 3 days – when I called the office they said 'they were working when he left'. Workman told me they are easily blown because the bulbs are cold – they should not be kept in the garage. Subsequent electrician showed me bulbs were not fitted correctly. Customer in Brighton, 1 February 2012

Reply from Trader: We first attended on the 1st February 2012 to replace smoke detectors and a heat detector as quoted. Whilst on site we were asked to replace 4 lamps in down lights which the client supplied. We did this at no charge and left all lights working. We called on the 28th February 2012 to chase payment and left a message but did not receive a call back. We then called again on the 12th March 2012 to chase payment and left a message. We received a call back on the 12th March 2012 to say that these lights were no longer working. We said to the client that we could have an engineer out on the same day to investigate the lights not working but if this was not a fault of ours then we would have to charge for the visit. The client then decided she did not want us to come and investigate her faulty lights. Considering the above we feel the clients score is unfair and unreasonable. The client has said in telephone conversation that she was very happy with the works we were contracted to carry out.

New wiring to various new lights, fitted new fuse box.

The work was completed on time, cleared up well. Polite and competent, took pride in his work. Customer in Lancing, 31 January 2012
